

The PROFESSIONAL SOIL SCIENTISTS ASSOCIATION OF CALIFORNIA is pleased to announce that they are now accepting registrations for their April 20-22, 2017 Annual Meeting and Field Tour.

The meeting will be based out of Lodi, California, and will focus on a wide variety of Sacramento Delta region topics.

We will start the meeting off with a series of talks providing a geographical orientation, and historical and background information on the challenges of the Sacramento Delta Region. Confirmed speakers will be listed on the website.

We will visit the USDA NRCS PLANT MATERIALS CENTER (PMC) and have a presentation by Dr. Margaret Smither-Kopperl and Ms. Valerie Bullard on PMC operation and cover crops. Focus will be on the NRCS Soil Health Initiative, and field soil health assessment factors. Comparisons will be observed between conventional tillage practices and no-till (conservation) tillage and cover crop rotations. The Columbia (Fluvent) soil series will be viewed.

On Earth Day, April 22nd, we will visit STATEN ISLAND AND TALK WITH THE NATURE CONSERVANCY managers, Dawit Zeleke and Morgan Johnson, who will discuss the challenges of managing for wildlife habitat in relation to supporting that operation with agriculture, by legal mandate. This entails Sand Hill Crane habitat requirements, crop rotations, managing mineral and organic soils, sub-irrigation methodology, fertility management, herbicide management, levee maintenance and the regulatory balancing act. Truly fascinating. Oh, and then there are the Delta issues! It is a rare opportunity to view the 'peat dirt' and the 'yellow dirt' (as they call it) side-by-side. We will tour the island and look at the Rindge (Histosol) and Valdez (Fluvent) series.
